

How to monitor pupil behaviours, attendance, wellbeing and personal development

One of the most important things our schools do is to help develop the life skills, knowledge and behaviours of our children that will help our young people be successful in life. Monitoring of our schools personal development curriculum and how the school supports pupils wellbeing has never been more important. This course helps governors and trustees understand what to look for when monitoring the PHSE and citizenship curriculum, life skills and relationship and health education and the impact of these on pupil behaviours, attendance, wellbeing and personal development.

What you will learn:

- What are the mental health and wellbeing expectations for schools?
- Understanding links with school ethos, equality, behaviour, attendance and safeguarding
- How can boards quantify the issues and monitor available support?
- What is a 'Mentally Healthy School'?
- What are behaviours for learning?
- Why ethos, values and behaviour are important
- The board's role in giving pupils a voice
- How to monitor pupil mental health and wellbeing in your school
- How to monitor pupils personal development
- How to monitor pupil behaviour and attitudes
- How to monitor attendance and persistent absence

All delegates receive an electronic copy of the presentation and supporting materials and resources to help them be more impactful in their governance role.

Who should attend?
